Job Opening

Senior Researcher in Economics and Head of Research Group

The Institute for Advanced Studies \(IHS\) is looking for a dynamic senior researcher who is able and willing to serve as a leader of the research group “Macroeconomics and Business Cycles”. The appointment as a senior researcher is full-time and permanent and is available from October 2022 onwards. The position as head of research group is for a term of five years with the possibility of reappointment based on performance and strategic development of the group.

IHS is an independent, non-profit and non-university research institute in Vienna (Austria) with a focus primarily on economics, sociology, and political science. Since its founding as an economic and social research institute in 1963, IHS was always striving for excellence and has combined academic and applied research. Funded by grants from public authorities and by competitive and commissioned research projects, the Institute employs about 100 researchers and around 25 PhD candidates and brings together high-level expertise from various disciplines and countries to address fundamental economic and social issues. The institute is routinely engaged in the evaluation of economic and social policy choices. In this endeavor the IHS has acquired an outstanding reputation within Austria but is also well-recognized internationally.

About the Research Group

The Research Group “Macroeconomics and Business Cycles” focusses on the theoretical and empirical analysis of macroeconomic dynamics and the analysis of policy relevant research questions, mainly in the areas of economic growth, business cycles, macroeconomic forecasting, and financial markets. The group develops economic models with a sound theoretical foundation and applies them for evaluating economic policies. All models are subject to rigorous empirical evaluation and adapted to reflect the institutional characteristics of the Austrian and European economies, including their strong international connectivity. The group consists of twelve researchers and several fellows and carries out numerous projects every year. For more details on the group’s profile, see the website.

The position is directed at researchers holding a PhD, having several years of experience in academia as well as in policy advice, and with good relations to relevant stakeholders in Austria and beyond. As Head of the Research Group, you are expected to raise funding from commissioned research as well as competitive grants to finance the research group. In addition, you are overseeing the group's scientific development, advise other group members, coordinating ongoing and future research efforts, and participating in the institute's strategic advancement.

Job profile

- PhD in economics
- Strong publication record in one of the following fields: macroeconomics, monetary economics, international economics, econometrics and/or econometric modeling
- Several years of experience with cooperating in and coordinating empirical research projects
- Experience and/or strong interest in giving policy-advice
- Extensive first-hand knowledge of econometric modeling and business cycle research
- Experience with acquisition of third-party funding at the national and international level (competitive research grants as well as commissioned research)
- Experience as team leader or convincing willingness to do so
- Experience with budgeting and financing of a Research Group or convincing willingness to acquire this qualification
- Passionate in communicating with decision makers in science, politics, business, and society
- Fluent in English and German (B1)

Desirable additional qualifications

- Venia Docendi or equivalent status
- Experience with external representation (particularly especially in dealing with stakeholders and clients from politics and public sector as well as with the public and the media)
- Good knowledge of the institutional setting of Austria and the European Union
- Experience in supervising early-stage career researchers (PhD candidates)

If you fit this description, you can expect the following at the Institute

You will do research in ongoing projects at IHS and will have the opportunity to pursue your own scientific interests. IHS offers the infrastructure and the opportunities to carry out academic research and scholarly exchange at an international level (organization of workshops, conferences, etc.). You will be involved in ongoing policy discussions with a potential to obtain substantial visibility in national media. The IHS provides an intellectually challenging and exciting environment with an international atmosphere, and flexible and family-friendly working times. The Institute is located in the center of Vienna with excellent access to public transportation.

The minimal salary before taxes as senior researcher currently amounts to € 4.500 per month (14x); the position of head of research group is remunerated with a monthly extra payment of currently € 750,- (14x and will be part of the contract). The Institute has an equal opportunity policy, with special emphasis on increasing the number of women in research positions, and specifically encourages female candidates to apply.
